<td>I think French class and the wonderful teachers have taught me a lot, because before I entered school French classes, I knew no French. Now, I am entering the ninth grade, and feel fairly comfortable in French class, and I feel I am good with the material I am learning. Of course, some of this comes from such wonderful teachers, especially during my eighth grade year. Though all of my classes have taught me a lot, especially French and Math, I could have learned a lot of things from other subjects with my own resources. French and Mathematics would be much harder.</td>

<td>I think accelerated Biology/Chemistry taught me the most because it gave me patience. It killed me and stressed me out and made me freak out at 3 AM because it was that hard and the teacher was so unhelpful it would have been easier if she just hadn't shown up. But that class did teach me patience and how to remain sane while freaking out.</td>
